

For a new track, you will choose either a template from the “_Blank” folder or from the “Samplers” folder. The track templates are identical to each other except that the Sampler versions have Kontakt/Play/Engine/etc already preloaded on them. It just saves a step when setting up your new tracks... in keeping with the OTR tradition of being efficient.

So now, choose either “Samplers” or “Blank” and you will see this option:

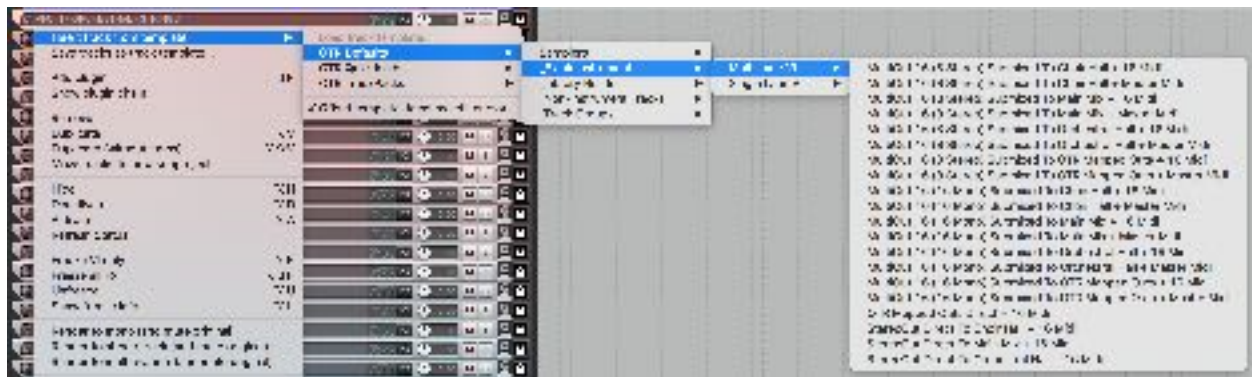

Just like options would seem to mean, you will either be loading up a single track, or a set of tracks with pre-routed midi channels and outputs. Once you choose your style of track type, open up, you will then be faced with the following options:

For Single Lane VI

For Multi Lane VI

Let’s quickly review what these options mean. And when I say quickly, I mean as briefly as possible because there is also a five-part video series on the Storyteller Youtube channel as well as on
